A Poem

By Hannah (Teepee)

Turtles, turtles, everywhere.
Flying, flying, through the air.
Up across a land so grand.
Landing softly in the sand.
Playing in the sea below.
Romping, stomping to and fro,
They're flying turtles.

The Story of the Whippoorwill Monster

by Kennedy (Teepee)

Once upon a time, there was a boy in Log Cabin who would never listen to the counselors. One day Ben (that was his name) went on a trail hike with his friends. He played a prank so the counselors would think he was lost. He went off the trail and came upon an old broken-down shed.

He wondered what was inside. He crept up to the old shed. Suddenly a giant hand reached out and grabbed Ben around the neck and dragged him inside the shed. An awful odor came from inside, choking Ben. Inside a fire was burning and, holding him by the neck, was the biggest "thing" Ben had ever seen! It was a ten-foot living monster!

As Ben stared in disbelief he realized this was the Whippoorwill monster. It had a knife and started to sharpen it. When it was done it slowly came upon Ben, brandishing the knife. It slowly brought down the knife.

Right as it almost touched him, a blast of light hit him like a wave standing before him. It was the Whippoorwill unicorn! He hopped on it and it ran away but not before the monster slashed at the Whippoorwill unicorn.

When they came out (far away from the shed) the unicorn started to fade away. A nasty streak of blood on its neck and it was gone. Suddenly Ben started to grow fur, a horn, and a tail. In a flash, Ben had become a unicorn!

To this day, the unicorn has made it bright so no one is lost in the trees.

About Me

by Bridger (Log Cabin)

I am 8. I love the Navy, Air Force, Army and Marines. I plan to be in the Army when I'm older. This year my sister almost drowned me in the pool. I used to love trains but I never saw one again, so I quit. I'm very nice. I do not have even 2 friends! Don't worry, I have 1 friend. Right now I'm at Whippoorwill but we leave in 1 hour so I'm almost home. Goodbye!
